Seoul Spurns N. Korean Offer to Heal Breach

SEOUL (AP). — South Korea's majority Democratic Party has summarily rejected North Korea's call for economic and cultural exchanges as a step towards peaceful unification of the divided country.

Sierra Leone Shows the Way

Proper education and training of an African administration are the key to success of newly independent African states, says Mr. Rogers Wright, Minister of Housing and Town and Country Planning, Judging by recent events, Sierra Leone can indeed set an example for many African states in this respect.

With the Congo in the news ever since it achieved independence six weeks ago, one cannot help asking African leaders from other countries to draw comparisons and to view the prospects of their own independence. 30-year-old lawyer Minister Wright, whose youthful and dynamic appearance belies his age, answers emphatically to the point: "While the Congo with its 14 million people is reported to have only a score of university graduates, Sierra Leone has some 5,000 university graduates and Sierra Leoneans hold the rank of major and lieutenant in the local army. Even now, we have some 200 students in British universities, in addition to some 300 technical trainees in the U.S. and Germany and Switzerland."

A country three times the size of Israel and with the same population, Sierra Leone is to achieve independence on April 27, 1961. Many key positions in its administration in addition to an all-African cabinet, are held by British subjects, most of whom have received their university training at Freetown, the capital of Sierra Leone.

Mr. Wright, who is the leader of the United Progressive Party, the former official Opposition in the House of Representatives until it joined a coalition Cabinet last May, seems to be confident that the country, as any other territory under British administration, is approaching independence in a way that will ensure the proper and peaceful changeover to local Government. To substantiate this view, he mentions only a few of the key factors in the process:

— The Acting Chief Justice and four out of the five members of the Supreme Court, the Acting Attorney General, the Commissioner of Police, almost the entire Medical and Health Department and the President of Freetown Bay University, a well-known pathologist.

His party was in opposition because of its insistence on independence at an early stage, and when last March's London conference reached an accord on the final independence date, Mr. Wright did not hesitate to join the Government. A new, separate portfolio was created by dividing the former Ministry of Works and Housing into two Ministries, with Mr. Kande Bureh, who headed last year's Sierra Leone Government, as Minister of Housing and Labour Minister. The new Minister of Housing is Mr. Wright.

Don Bus Workers Strike To Protest Co-op's 'Selectivity'

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Some 600 employed workers of the Dan Bus Cooperative went on a 12-hour wildcat strike here yesterday. The walkout was hardly noticed by the bus travelling public, however.

Dan mobilized most of its members to work on the routes, and kept the buses running on a normal schedule. The strike was led by hired workers, including bus conductors, began at midday and continued until midnight. It followed the strike of the Egged workers in the North on Sunday.

It was called in protest against the cooperative management's policy of membership. The cooperatives had sent letters only to some of the employed workers seeking for membership in the cooperative, and the cooperatives had not accepted the letters of the others.

The cooperatives maintain that they have the right to decide which workers they will accept. They have agreed to carry out the instructions of the Histadrut on the number of employees who are to be employed as full members over the next four years, but wish to make their own choice.

The Histadrut said that the method of co-opting the new members should be worked out jointly by the cooperatives and the Histadrut. A meeting between Mr. Y. Menahem, of the Histadrut Executive, and the cooperatives will be held on Wednesday to try and iron out the differences.

The Dan employees, meanwhile, decided at their protest meeting at Beit Brenner yesterday to join a nationwide strike of hired workers in the Egged, Dan and Haneke cooperatives. If the management do not withdraw their letters, the employees will join the strike.

U.S. to Study Effect of Farm Surpluses on Israel Economy

Jerusalem Post Staff
Israel will be the first subject of a pilot study intended to estimate the effects of U.S. surplus crop exports on national economies.

The study will be part of a world-wide evaluation project to be launched shortly by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It will also provide background for future U.S. agricultural market development programs.

The project was announced yesterday by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Ezra Taft Benson, at a press conference in Tel Aviv. He said that the Bank of Israel had been contacted to carry out the project, which will attempt to determine how the surpluses have affected food consumption and how they have helped to promote various aspects of the national economy.

A Busy Day
The press conference was held in the afternoon of a busy day which took Mr. Benson from a dedication ceremony at the U.S. Consulate in Haifa to a tour of Nahalal in company with Agriculture Minister Moshe Dayan, and a visit to the Dagan development project.

From Tel Aviv, Mr. Benson travelled to Jerusalem where he was guest of honor at a dinner given at the King David Hotel by Prime Minister Ben-Gurion.

Mr. Benson said he believed the American surplus had contributed greatly to reducing the pressure of inflation in Israel, had helped end food rationing and had improved the per capita food intake.

Last year, Israel imported $60m. worth of agricultural commodities from the U.S. Dr. Alfred Kahn, Head of the Economic Department of Cornell University, has arrived for a three-week stay to supervise the survey.

Fight Against Mite
Mr. Benson said that, if requested, he would send an entomologist to Israel to help combat the mite plague now ravaging cotton crops in the Jezreel and Beisan Valleys. The pest, which has spread rapidly within the past few days, is now reported to be threatening 40 per cent of total area planted this year.

In the morning, Mr. Benson dedicated the new extension of the Dagan site, which was partly financed by a U.S. Cooley Amendment loan. Mr. Benson told the Jerusalem Post that discussions on future farm surplus aid to Israel were being held with the Ministry of Agriculture. He had asked Israeli officials to put forward a list of products needed here, for possible

T.A. Council Rejects Bid to Raze Jaffa
Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Tel Aviv Municipality Council decided Sunday, in its last session before the summer recess, to set up a Jaffa development corporation.

The Council earlier rejected a demand by Mrs. O. Kanan-Chay (Mapai) that the Old City of Jaffa be razed to make way for a new development. The Council also rejected the proposal that the families living in condemned buildings would be offered alternative housing.

The whole area will be given a face-lifting and artists will be encouraged to set up studios and galleries there, he said.

The Council also adopted Mr. Menahem's proposal that the Ministry of Justice appoint an arbitrator to settle differences between the management of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra and the City in regard to the Mann Auditorium.

Hay Ricks Burn in 2 Corridor Kibbutzim
The Jerusalem fire brigade was called out twice yesterday to fight blazes that broke out in hay ricks at two kibbutzim. Trains and cars were blocked in the Jerusalem corridor.

In both instances, large quantities of hay went up in smoke before the fire could be brought under control. It is thought that a burning cigarette thrown from a visitor's car was at fault in the case of the kibbutz near the city.

STOCKHOLM (AP). — The 11th International Astronomical Congress opened here yesterday with more than 200 delegates including some of the world's top space experts. The seven-man Soviet delegation included Leonid I. Sedov, President of the International Astronomical Federation which is organizing the Congress; Sputnik expert Anatoliy Blagovestov; and Alexander Mikhailov, head of the Leningrad Observatory.

Among the 150 Americans are the German-born rocket pioneer Wernher von Braun; Theodore von Karman, a NATO astronautical advisor born in Hungary; Andrew G. Haley, former President of the I.A.F.; and N. W. Snyder of the Institute for Defense Analysis in Washington.

Richard Graves Dies at 79

The death is reported from London of Richard Massie Graves, one-time Chairman of the Municipal Commission of Jerusalem. He was 79.

Graves, a half-brother of poet Robert Graves, was appointed Labour Adviser to the Government of Palestine in 1947. He was in Jerusalem from 1947 to 1948.

He served as Director of the Palestine Department of Labour. In February 1947, Mr. Graves announced his retirement, but in May of that year the British Colonial Office appointed him Chairman of the unpopular Jerusalem Commission of the elected Council.

He sought open-city for Jerusalem, in the hope that it would thereby escape damage by the war. He was in the city when the Sea Divert was laid up in Haifa port over the winter. Mr. Link will return to the city in the next few days for another season.

In Lake Kinneret, his divers had discovered and salvaged a large amount of pottery, which he had taken and sold. He described his Palestine experiences in a book, "Experiment in Anarchy."

In February, 1950, Graves was erroneously reported dead in a cable from London. Then Palestine Post daily printed the wrong news, which it received his cable that he was still alive.

Nehru Warning On Separatism
NEW DELHI (Reuters). — Police violating India's ban on separatist activities in favour of a Punjabi-speaking state at an India Independence Day rally here addressed by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

One hundred and fifty Sikhs were arrested yesterday for separatist activities. Speaking emotionally in Hindi, Mr. Nehru told the huge crowd that India's freedom could only be weakened by internal conflict and separatism, and that attempts to place provinces, language, communalism or caste above country would "spell disaster."

On the border situation, Mr. Nehru said India would face the dangers on its borders with all its might. "We have no desire to take any military action," he said. At the same time, it is clear that we will not allow anybody to come on our soil or threaten our freedom. These things go together.

Mr. Nehru also warned that India would eventually "jettison" the problem of Goa, a Portuguese colony and the last remaining foreign possession in Indian territory.

Eisenhower Praised Recovery of Capsule
WASHINGTON (Reuters). — President Eisenhower yesterday praised the recovery of a capsule from orbit around the earth as further evidence that the U.S. has forged ahead in the worthwhile exploration of space.

During a White House ceremony at which the capsule was shown to him, the President said that this success should lead to further achievements in space exploration, even as having a man come back to tell us about it.

The 56-pound capsule was recovered from the Pacific northwest of Hawaii last Thursday after it had been carried round the world 17 times by the Discoverer XIII satellite. The bowl-shaped capsule, made of gold-plated aluminum, showed some signs of scorching where the nose cone had burned away during re-entry to the earth's atmosphere.

Traces of Colossus Found At Entrance to Caesarea Port

By YACOV FREEDLER, Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA. — "Tangible evidence of a colossus" has been discovered on the seabottom at the entrance to Caesarea harbour. The discovery, the Link Underwater Archaeology Expedition, will try to raise enough remnants to make its reconstruction possible.

This was revealed yesterday to the Jerusalem Post by Mr. Efraim Link, owner of the expedition vessel Sea Diver, and leader of the team. Obviously excited, Mr. Link said that the find had been made "mainly" where Joseph Flavius reported a colossus to have been built at the harbour entrance. This may be the first modern proof that his reports were correct.

Questioned on the team's work at Caesarea and the risk, he said that their find had exceeded expectations. "There is enough work for a lifetime," he said, "and the team is prepared to continue the exploration work beyond the single season originally planned. Work will continue through October when the Sea Diver will be laid up in Haifa port over the winter. Mr. Link will return with the team in the next few days for another season."

In Lake Kinneret, his divers had discovered and salvaged a large amount of pottery, which he had taken and sold. He described his Palestine experiences in a book, "Experiment in Anarchy."

The position of part of the treasure, found in one corner of the site, had been stored in a boat.

M.D.'s Don't Want To Report on Patients
Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA. — The Central Committee of the Medical Association has appealed to the Attorney-General to release doctors from the obligation to give information about their patients to the authorities.

The appeal follows reports of a doctor who had been threatened with a fine for refusing to give information about a patient who had been shot by the police.

The committee stated that the knowledge that a doctor must inform the police might lead to a doctor's refusal to treat patients, thus endangering their lives.

As an example, the Committee recalled that during the recent war, a doctor who refused to give information about a patient who had been shot by the police, was threatened with a fine.

were crushed and impoverished in the Second World War, and wonders have been achieved through this aid. The centre of gravity of world problems now passes from Europe and Africa, which are the homes of the human race, to the high and highly developed nations to assist their fellows, whose rights, status and educational opportunities have been restricted by history for decades and centuries, to overcome these limitations. They should offer this aid not as the charity of the rich to the poor, or the kindness of the strong, but as the obligation of fellow-members of the same human family, out of a feeling of equality, comradeship and universal human solidarity, to rectify a historic wrong and to establish throughout the globe a family of nations, founded on moral, social and economic equality, mutual confidence, aid and respect, and sincere cooperation in the utilization of all the achievements of humanity and its scientific and technological discoveries.

"These two revolutions (political and intellectual), which seem to be taking place independently in our day, are merged and combined, the one character of the human race can be transformed. It can be a family of nations of all whose members enjoy equal access to all the resources of nature and the achievements of science and knowledge, in peace and cooperation; all the barriers and conflicts between, nations, colours and races can be broken down, and human relationships can be established in all countries on foundations of freedom and dignity, mutual aid and sincere cooperation, and a discrimination, devoid of prejudice."

Jerusalem Post Reporter
BNEI BRAK. — A mass rally of an estimated 10,000 members of Agudat Yisrael was held here last night in the square near the Wagonal Hotel to protest the independence of the Poalei Aguda faction in the Jewish Government.

The gathering was addressed by the President of the Council of Agudat Yisrael, Rabbi Shimon Shkufman, the Agudat Yisrael spokesman, who said that Guy and other prominent religious leaders. Most of the speakers demanded that Poalei Aguda be expelled from the Jewish Government.

One of the resolutions adopted at the protest meeting asked that all members of Poalei Aguda be expelled from the Jewish Government. A second resolution called for the Jewish Government to strengthen the ranks of Agudat Yisrael.

In Tel Aviv, meanwhile, an Aguda spokesman yesterday claimed that 900 persons had already left Poalei Aguda to join their new labour faction. But this was denied by Poalei Aguda spokesmen, who said that only 10 members had transferred their loyalty.

The two parties split up after Poalei Aguda joined the government coalition several months ago.

Alert 13-Year-Old Gled by Police
Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA. — An alert 13-year-old girl, Hannah Sason, was awarded a IL25 prize by Chief Inspector Y. Shif, of the Haifa police yesterday, in recognition of her part in capturing two petty thieves.

A month ago, Hannah, who lives in Kiryat Eliezer, spotted two suspicious-looking characters shuffling around a parked and empty bus. Following their movements, she saw them climb into the driver's seat and extract a sum of money, and then make off on a Bat Galim bus.

Hannah alerted the bus driver, and with the aid of a passing policeman, the trio were caught. The two men were caught with the money still on them.

At the police station, the two men were recognized as habitual criminals with a long record of theft and other crimes.

Israeli Con-Man Runs Foul Of Police in Argentina
TEL AVIV. — Yisrael Zohar, a confidence man known in Israel as "Hechosel", was arrested in Argentina on suspicion of taking part in the theft of $700,000 worth of travellers' cheques.

Zohar had been involved in many cases of fraud in Israel, passing off green paper as dollars and gold-plated objects as gold. After a prison term in Israel, he fled to Argentina in 1958, working as a collector for a public institution for a time. After losing this job, he tried selling various kinds of objects, but finally had to give it up and leave the country because he was known too well.

Last November, Zohar left for France. The first word Israel Police heard of him since was an Interpol bulletin that arrived a few days ago, stating that he was in Argentina. The Interpol circular added that Zohar had been arrested in Chile last April as Yisrael Zohar, a German national, in connection with the theft of travellers' cheques in Montevideo. He was subsequently released.

A short time later, a man by the name of Selik Korzhav, — no other than Yisrael Zohar, "Hechosel" — was arrested by Argentinian police in connection with the theft of travellers' cheques in Montevideo. He was subsequently released.

Zohar Gas Estimates Up

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Estimates of the potential gas reserves of the Zohar field have been revised upwards by the Ministry of Petroleum. The new estimate is 1.5 billion cubic feet, up from 1 billion cubic feet.

The new estimate is based on a re-evaluation of Well Number Five, which now registers a daily output of 1.5 million cubic feet. This figure is exceeded only by the output of Well Number Four, which produces 2.1 million cubic feet.

The Naphtali Company is now reported to be planning an additional well in the vicinity of Number Five, which has been thought to be the southern limit of the field.

STRUCK TEXTILE MILL MAY BECOME CO-OP
ACRE. — Negotiations on turning over the Kibbutz textile industry Ltd. to the ownership of the workers have been going on for the past few days between the Workers' Committee and the company. There is a possibility that by week's end, the factory will resume operations on the basis of a co-operative.

The plant has been struck-bound for the past few weeks, and the firm is in serious financial difficulty. Efforts are being made to find new financial backing which would enable the workers to take over the plant. Each of the 30 employees would have to put up IL2,000.

MUTUAL NEEDS OF REBORN NATIONS

In his opening address to the International Conference on Science in the Advancement of New States at the Weizmann Institute on Tuesday, Mr. Meyer Weisgal, Chairman of the Executive Council of the Institute, welcomed the delegates by saying: "The purpose of this conference is to bring together the scientists of the world to discuss the problems of the new states and to find ways in which science can help to solve them."

We have always felt the need to meet together with the other infant nations which, like us, are struggling with the problems of the world. In the aggregate we represent a turning point in world history. Historically speaking, destiny brought us together simultaneously on the world stage. Mutual regard, and the understanding born of it, should guide us in the fulfillment of that destiny.

The age of patron and client peoples is gone. A new spirit has been infused into the relations of all peoples. The old and the new, the past and the future, are moving forward in the long and illustrious career of our teacher and founder, Dr. Chaim Weizmann, statesman, scientist, and humanist. From his resting place within these precincts he looks down upon the beginning of the fulfillment of his dream—the coming together of nations which have shaken off the frustration of the past to enter on the universal heritage of freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

Mighty Forces
In each of us the experience of the past has created particular capacities which must be placed at each other's disposal and at the disposal of the world. Individually these capacities are ineffective; pooled, they are a mighty and beautiful force. We have in common the enthusiasm and creative energy of reborn nations; let us also hold in common our special gifts and the special results of our separate and peculiar histories.

The peculiarity of Israel's history lies in the fact that we have been able to produce in this small area—at the crossroads of Asia and Africa—a concentration of knowledge and techniques acquired in the long ages of our dispersion. You, our guests, bring to us a youthful zest and an alertness without which our particular abilities must languish unused. Let us together, then, devise a new doctrine of technical cooperation among small nations. In more human terms, let us discuss the recognition of the need for the foundation of our future. Whatever the past has placed in our hands, we place in yours. Whatever you can give us in exchange, we will gratefully receive. May these days be long and happily remembered not only for what we say here, but for the deeds to which they are a pledge.

PAX ROMANA

Editor, The Jerusalem Post
Sir,—Lisbon, this month, 200 delegates from 65 countries will gather to study, plan and discuss at the International Assembly of Pax Romana, the International Movement of Catholic Students (IMCS). Representing 77 Catholic states, the delegates from all over the world, they will come to plan the future of the IMCS for the next two years and to discuss the theme, "The Search for International Awareness." The assembly is being held in Lisbon, Portugal, from August 10-22. The two Portuguese federations have been preparing for the arrival of the 200 delegates at the University City, but there will be little of the holiday atmosphere despite its taking place in this popular tourist city. Sessions and workshops will run six hours a day with additional meetings scheduled for some evenings. On August 12, the Feast of the Assumption, there will be a break for a trip to Fatima. Message from U Nu

Weizmann Institute of Science is to be warmly congratulated on its initiative in organizing this International Conference of Science in the Advancement of Developing States. We live in an age where science makes a marvelous discovery after another, discoveries which, properly adapted, could make for man a heaven on earth. Yet we are faced with the anomaly that the vast majority of the world's population today lives in conditions not greatly different from those of their forefathers. But while their material conditions may have remained largely unchanged, their aspirations have not.

In every part of the globe, the revolution in communications has brought about a widening of man's horizons, evoking growing and more insistent demands which can only be met by mankind's collective effort. For the next two weeks, this conference will devote itself to this most important problem of our times. To those who are gathered in Rehovot today to help in a search for its solution, I send my cordial greetings and best wishes. I am confident that this conference will prove an important landmark in mankind's advance toward a better, happier world.

YESTERDAY'S PRESS:

The Rehovot Conference

Davies (Hindustan), calling the Rehovot Conference a very important and significant attempt to bring together the scientific forces in the world for aid to the new countries, notes that the theories about superior and inferior races have been proved false, and adds that in the past few years Israel has not only become a geographical meeting place between the new and developing countries, she not only feels the urgency of the problem and her responsibility for doing something about it, but she also translates this feeling into action. Weizmann Institute of Science and its President, Mr. Abba Eban, have a great achievement to their credit in the organization of the conference.

Hertz (General Zionist) says: "The Rehovot Conference is a very important and significant attempt to bring together the scientific forces in the world for aid to the new countries, notes that the theories about superior and inferior races have been proved false, and adds that in the past few years Israel has not only become a geographical meeting place between the new and developing countries, she not only feels the urgency of the problem and her responsibility for doing something about it, but she also translates this feeling into action. Sir,—Though I am not religious at all, I know that there are places which must be respected. I was therefore astonished, on a visit to Mount Herzl, to see visitors to the Tomb and to the graves of Sprinck and Kaplan, as well as to the military cemetery, wearing no headgear at all.

Sir,—I was very pleased to hear the founding of the "Anti-Noise League" in Haifa, and I am convinced that in the course of time many improvements will be achieved. Would it not be possible to have watchmen go through the streets after 11 in the evening? I don't dare speak of all the noise between 2.00 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon but this is also an important thing to consider, to see to it that it is quiet! I am convinced that most people would gladly give a monthly payment to this league if all the sources of noise—teen-agers returning from the club after midnight, singing and shouting; people speaking to each other from balcony to balcony, shouting into the street or loudly conversing with guests on their terraces until a late hour, etc. etc.—would thereby be eliminated or reduced.

Herzl's Student Days

Anti-Semitic Experience at University

By JONAS FRAENKEL

HERZL'S search for an escape from anti-Semitism can be traced directly to his experiences as a member of the Albia student society, without which he might never have written the play "The New Ghetto," or the pamphlet "The Jewish State." Herzl joined the Albia in 1888, two years after enrolling at Vienna University. The society, which had been founded in 1871, did not identify itself with any political party, although serious political discussions and conflicts often broke out among the members—and, at the time Herzl joined, anti-Semitism was not yet common among the students.

Herzl spent a few happy years at the University. He proudly wore his blue-and-gold ribbon and its cap, attended the formal fencing classes twice a day and took a special course under a fencing master. He was a good drinking companion, played cards, sang songs, went on rambles with the Albia students and generally enjoyed his life. His friends were members of Albia. On May 11, 1881, he fought his obligatory duel, with a member of the Albia society, Karl Koch, both contestants ending up duly disgraced. That evening they held a drinking party, laughed and had a good time.

Herzl spent a great deal of time at the Albia den and at its coffeehouse, and the other students liked and respected him. His journalistic gifts made him popular, and he was under the impression that his best friends were becoming anti-Semites.

It was the discussion of the Jewish question at corporate meetings that first aroused Herzl's interest in anti-Semitism. In particular, in the writings of Professor Eugen Dühring, Adolf Hitler's spiritual teacher, Herzl wanted every Jew to read Dühring, so he could understand the world of the new anti-Semitism.

"Out of the ghetto! Away from the ghetto!" Even then this was Herzl's way of solving the Jewish problem. But it was not until his friend Hermann Bahr of the Albia, who was a Zionist, delivered an anti-Semitic speech at a mass student gathering after the death of Richard Wagner, on March 1, 1882, that his road definitely parted from that of the student society.

Wagner's Creed
The speaker was to have been Ernst Hoernig, Albia's President, but he fell ill and Bahr was asked to take his place.

Every Albia member had a poem to recite. Bahr was chosen to recite the poem, "The Jewish Question," which was a parody on Wagner's "The Ring of the Nibelung."

As for the rest, one wonders to what extent the hammering was built into the production and to what extent it was triumphantly carried by incompetent acting. A single exception is the man who portrays the gangster, but our praiseworthy intention of bringing him to the attention of a grateful public was stymied by the very limited legibility of the credits and an apparent conspiracy between the exhibitor (no information and no publicity material) and the producing studio (no publicity material and no publicity material). We did spy Mr. Frisch's name on the credits.

MARGINAL COMMENT

POLITICS and SEMANTICS

By Nissim Rejman

As a geo-political concept of some standing, the term "Middle East" must be one of the most difficult in the world to define. In fact, although many people claim to do so, no one seems to know where the Middle East is. To cite only one example: In 1957, when the Eisenhower Doctrine was proclaimed, providing for American military and economic aid to nations "in the general area of the Middle East," the late John Foster Dulles told the Committees of the House and Senate that the area referred to was that "lying between and including Libya on the west and Pakistan on the east and Turkey on the north and the Arabian Peninsula to the south." So far, so good; but a year later, at the time of the Lebanese rebellion and the July 14 revolution in Baghdad, the State Department spokesmen told reporters that the Middle East—which he said was now identical with the old term Near East—comprised Egypt, Syria, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, and the Persian Gulf Sheikdoms. This Middle East had very little relation to Mr. Dulles' definition of a year before, since it managed to cut out over two-thirds of his Middle East.

NOT that the position was any better in Britain, where the term Middle East was originally coined. According to Professor Roderic H. Davison ("Where Is the Middle East?" Foreign Affairs, July 1960), at one time during World War II, Churchill was prepared to see the Middle East merge into Europe—as he contemplated the "possibility of the centre of gravity in Middle East shifting suddenly from Egypt to the Balkans, and from Cairo to Constantinople." Yet after the war Churchill wrote: "I had always felt that the name 'Middle East' for Egypt, the Levant, Syria and Turkey was ill-chosen. This was the Near East. Persia and Iraq were the Middle East; India, Burma and Malaya the Far East." But whatever Churchill thought privately, official confusion over the use of this term reigned supreme in London official circles. On April 16, 1946, Premier Attlee was asked in the Commons "whether it is the intention to continue to use the term 'Middle East' to cover those geographical areas which, in the past, had been referred to as 'Near East' and 'Middle East'." To which the reply was that, as it had become the accepted practice to use "Middle East" to cover the Arab world "and certain neighboring countries," his Government saw no reason to change this practice. When Mr. Keating, a vice-president of the Royal Geographical Society, objected that, if Egypt was to be called "Middle East," then there was no knowing where the Near East was now, Mr. Attlee was flippant enough to tell him: "It all depends where you are in the world."

But student life was to affect Herzl again in a historical manner. When he had written "The New Ghetto" and "The Jewish State," he intended to retire from all Zionist activity—until the students of Vienna's corporations (Kadimah, Ivria, Unitas, Libanonia and others) sent him an "Address of Austrian Students" in May, 1886, asking him to take over the leadership of the movement for the establishment of a Jewish state, and promising him their active assistance and support in the cause.

FURTHER attempts to save the Near East, as well as to arrive at a semantic settlement of the Middle East problem, continued to be made in the Commons. But the last of these gallant attempts, according to Professor Davison, was made on June 30, 1953, in the following brief exchange between two M.P.s:

Mr. Mayhew (Under-Secretary): There appears to be no agreed definition of these vague geographical terms. Brigadier Low: Since the last Gentleman and his right hon. Friends use these terms it is not a fact that they must know what they mean? Mr. Mayhew: Where precision would be required, we should not use these terms.

NOW, 15 years have elapsed since this surprisingly honest pronouncement was made, and we do not feel like ploughing through endless stacks of Hansard collections to find out whether the promise was kept. We are inclined to think, anyway, that "where precision is required," one should not normally go to Hansard.

and Mr. Anthony Nutting, then Joint Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs:
Mr. Cocks: What countries now remain in the Near East?
Mr. Nutting: The term "Near East" is now obsolete.
Mr. Mayhew: Does the Government share the view that the East begins at Dover?
But with the Near East safely dead and buried, the difficulty remained as to where, precisely, the Middle East lay. The British Government, always unwilling to be caught in logical argument, was still obliged to produce some sort of definition. On July 25, 1951, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs told the House of Commons that the countries included in the Middle East were Egypt, Turkey, Iraq, Persia, Syria, the Lebanon, Jordan, Israel, Saudi Arabia, the Trucial Sheikdoms, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, Muscat, the Aden Protectorate and the Yemen—a definition which left out Libya, Sudan, Cyprus, Ethiopia and Pakistan, some or all of which are invariably included in the general use of the term.

WELL, then, where on earth is the Middle East? Perhaps we had better turn to the United Nations for relief? In 1948, Dr. Charles Malik, of the Lebanon, suggested that an Economic Commission be created for this suggestion appointed a subcommittee to define the area in question, and decided that, in addition to those countries generally accepted in the Middle East community, the area included Afghanistan, Ethiopia and Greece. In the face of such general disagreement, Professor Davison suggests three possibilities for an intelligent use of the term Middle East:

- 1. To recognize the Middle East as shapeless—"territorially indefinable state of mind, like the Middle West in the United States."
- 2. To admit that there is no particular Middle East, but that there are as many Middle Easts "as there are problems touching this fuzzy region in any way." In this case the Middle East must on each occasion be redefined.
- 3. To agree on arbitrary limits. But if you don't like any of these three possibilities, there is a fourth one, suggested in yet another reply to a question in the House of Commons. On May 13, 1947, Brigadier Low asked the Foreign Secretary which countries are included in the term "Middle East" and which in the term "Near East."

Mr. Mayhew (Under-Secretary): There appears to be no agreed definition of these vague geographical terms. Brigadier Low: Since the last Gentleman and his right hon. Friends use these terms it is not a fact that they must know what they mean? Mr. Mayhew: Where precision would be required, we should not use these terms.
